SENATOR BOHLKE: Yes, Madam President and members. I have listened to a little bit of the discussion this morning, and, certainly, in my home community of Hastings, this has been something that has been a rather hot topic and, certainly, something our community has used. And what's really caused, to me, the controversy is the terminology of blighted and underdeveloped. People simply do not understand how you look at a cornfield and call it blighted, I mean blighted or substandard. And so I was asking Senator Kristensen, it is in the constitution now, referred that way, if the Constitutional Revision Committee couldn't simply change the terminology to underdeveloped, which I think makes much more sense and would take away some of the criticism from individuals who read that and say, that...that just makes no sense. And I don't know, Senator Hartnett, if that has been part of the problem in your area, but, certainly, people have said that that, you know, they...they do not like that terminology, and yet at the same time, they drive over the overpass out on 281 just north of Hastings, and I think I could count probably six businesses that have opened in that area using a TIF. Would they have opened? Doubtful, maybe, and so, you know, at the same time I think if that terminology hadn't been used, there would be a number of people who would look at that and say this is exciting, this is going on in our community, and so I think we need a clarification of that, and I don't really want to come at the problem by causing more paperwork and more planning and more reports. Our task...CRA meets in open, in a public meeting. They make the recommendation to the city council, which is then once again a public meeting, and so there is opportunity for very heated debate with those elected representatives. The city council appoints those members of the CRA and so I'm not quite sure, and I'll listen a little more, but how this would really improve the only thing in my area seems to be one of the biggest problems, and that's simply the terminology. And so I'll listen further, and I don't know if I have much time, Madam Chairman. If I do, you may use it, Senator Hartnett, to respond.

SENATOR CROSBY: Senator Hartnett, you have about two and a half minutes.

SENATOR HARTNETT: Yeah. Senator Bohlke, we really didn't address that problem. We really, you know, the blighted and
